A FEUD IN COURT. A Kentucky Row Will Be Given Trial if the Judge Will Serve.

Louisville, Ky., June 12 .- A special to the Courier-Journal from Barboursville, Ky., says:

The case of Speck Philpot, charged with killing Pelix Duvidson, was set for today at Manchester and it is reported that both the Philpots and Griffins were armed looking for a clash at any time. Judge Brown is trying to hold any time. Judge Brown is trying to hold court there, but under a great many disadvantages. The jurors and witnesses refused to serve, thinking Judge Brown's right to the judgeship is in doubt, they fear they will not get pay for their services. A jury was finally empaneled but with difficulty. Judge Brown adjourned court Saturday morning and left Manchester. The people there think he went to get Governor Beckham to send him some soldiers. It is thought by the citizens of the town that trouble is sure to come in the near future between the Philpots and Griffins.
